201	Presentation from Neil Woollard, Tidal Lagoon Power Neil Woollard informed members that Tidal Lagoon Power had identified 15 sites around the UK with potential for a lagoon. Swansea Bay, the first site identified had been in development for 4 years. The lagoon would last 120 years and provide 90% of Swansea's domestic use. The presentation included information on how a tidal lagoon works, the benefits to UK industry, the economic impact of a tidal lagoon and the multi-purpose infrastructure. Future lagoons would be developed at Cardiff and other locations in the Severn Estuary and elsewhere. The Mayor invited questions from councillors. In answer to questions, members were advised that with continual investments the technology could last longer than the initial 120 years' prediction. On the environmental impact members were informed that a tidal lagoon would not block the estuary so the impact was different to that of a barrage. Tidal Lagoon Power was working with environmental groups to mitigate potential impacts although much of it was still unknown. Funding and public subsidy was raised, and members were advised that the technology was cheaper than nuclear, comparable to wind. A strike price would be set for 30 years and then unsubsidised energy would be generated for the next 60 years. When questioned, Mr Woollard advised that a Chinese company had been appointed to build the harbour wall. The Mayor thanked Neil Woollard for his presentation. Councillor Lyall left the meeting at 7.34pm and rejoined the meeting at 7.37pm.

A member suggested the job centre could have a dedicated officer specifically to provide support and mentoring to ex-armed forces. The Mayor thanked Garry Hawkes for his presentation. Councillor Mark Canniford left the meeting at 7.53pm and rejoined the meeting at 7.54pm.

The museum would be free admission when it reopens and the possibility of anti-social behaviour was a concern to staff. A member suggested that anti-social behaviour in parks and toilets also needed to be addressed with PSPOs.
